The maximum depth of Octopus Bay is 30cm (300mm) which according to the Department of Education excursion policy does not qualify it as a 'closed water body', meaning you should not need to provide any additional supervision other than the lifeguards we have here onsite. Some schools policies may differ – so please double check the individual school policy.

8. Are qualified lifeguards used at the waterslide playground and Octopus Bay?

Yes, we have Royal Life Saving qualified lifeguards onsite supervising our attractions as required by the relevant laws at the required ratios. All our slides are also attended by trained attraction attendants.

9. How many lifeguards are stationed at the wet attractions?

A minimum of two qualified lifeguards are present onsite at the water bodies at all times, with other staff being trained attraction attendants. All team members have training in crisis and emergency management should any situation arise.

10. Who responds to First Aid and Incidents?

Each day we have four key leadership team members on site dedicated to responding to incidents should they occur, including a First Aid Officer. Our team members are First Aid trained as per national standards, with advanced resuscitation training also. Team members are then also trained across a variety of scenarios that could occur in the Park, including major first aid incidents, alongside park evacuation, fire training, wildlife awareness etc. We have a generously stocked First Aid room on site, including a defibrillator and epi-pens, so we are prepared for any situation that may arise.

We have a number of policies and procedures in place for in-park incidents, in brief; once the incident has been brought to our attention, they are assessed by the First Aid Officer, who will then alert the Duty Manager for the appropriate course of action. For First Aid incidents involving Guests who require immediate treatment, such as broken bones or unconsciousness – an ambulance would be called. More general incidents such as bumps and scraps are taken care of by our First Aid team.
